DIRECTOR'S NOTES

Tonight's play was written some twenty years ago but since we started rehearsals it has become quite topical as it refers to sleepers, submarines and MI6 personnel.

It shows how the lives of ordinary people are disrupted simply by the visit of the man from the Electricity Board and the Gas Man. No one wants to go to Scotland or postpone Sharon's impending wedding. These are just a few of the dilemmas that face Jenny and Ron in tonight's show.

Finding any information about Alan Griffiths the author of this play has proved difficult. His only writing credits listed on the internet are a one-act play called 'Figments' and this one. Very few other drama groups have produced the play which is surprising as we think he has produced a very amusing script.

We hope you enjoy our production and don't forget, when someone comes to read your meters, check their identities very carefully!

The group welcomes Lindsey Parr who plays Sharon. She is a member of the Bonington Players in Arnold, the Ravenshead Drama Group, the Alan Johnson Singers and is also involved with various film projects. Lindsey has made a valuable contribution to this production and we hope to see her in future shows.
