SNAP! Same play and same offer

WITH ten groups seeking space, it's iron rations! Perhaps the best idea is to take them in pairs.

East Bridgford DS and Bramcote with Stanton are doing the same play When We Are Married by J. B. Priestley and, by coincidence, both have decided to offer free seats to couples about to celebrate their silver weddings.

It's doubtful if the out-sized characters in the Yorkshire classic are an encouragement to face the next 25 years, but they provide splendid entertainment!

Bramcote's alliance with Stanton prospers and they are giving an extra performance this year. Phil Austin directs in Steve Locke's setting and Valerie Christian, NANDA's actress of the year, plays Maria.

East Bridgford have four performances at the village hall.

CONVENIENT for linking are two groups performing Ayckbourn plays.

The Co-op Arts Theatre tackle Absurd Person Singular, an early specimen but none the worse for that. Colin Treliving directs.

The second horse from the same stable is Arcade Players' production of Living Together, a follow-up to their previous Norman Conquests venture.

Barry Culley repeats his characterisation of the ubiquitous Norman and also appearing are Diane Hollingsworth, May Stringfellow, Jeanette Speak, Gordon Wallis and Ernest Speak.

KEYWORTH and Kegworth fit nicely together phonetically, though doing vastly different plays, a Victorian thriller Gaslight and a nostalgic American piece I Remember Mama.

Frances Goodman directs the former and Peter Greaves, winner of many Best Actor awards, may be giving his last performance because he's contemplating retirement.

Kegworth, and no village locally does finer work, have Margaret Wood producing, Janet Douse as Mama and, among a cast of 25, Elizabeth Hall, Lisa Herrod, Jo Rixon, Rita Wood, Lisa Skinner, Carole Smith, Terry Radford and Michael Oliver.
